Moderately organic soils are considered subdivisions of silts and clays, and are distinguished from inorganic soils by changes in their plasticity properties (and Atterberg limits) on drying. The European soil classification system (ISO 14688) is very similar, differing primarily in coding and in adding an "intermediate-plasticity" classification for silts and clays, and in minor details.

Soils. The type of subsoil will also influence the depth and width of foundations required; and sometimes affects more fundamental aspects of the foundation design. The ideal conditions to find are well-compacted sandy gravels (with the right mixture of porosity and compressive strength), chalks or sand/siltstone. Generally, these will allow for straightforward foundations. ...
